

DON STALLINGS

At the end of the Destiny Performing Arts Camp, participants put on a show full of singing and dancing.

Young actors learn cool moves at camp

Did you ever wish you could go to a drama camp to learn to be an actor, but you couldn't quite afford it? Now you have a chance to be a star.

There are 60 scholarships for kids this summer for the Destiny Performing Arts Camp. Day camp weeks at Oglethorpe University in Atlanta will be June 27-July 8 for ages 7 and up. Overnight camp at Brenau University in Gainesville for ages 8 and up will be June 11-24. There are sessions for everyone from beginners to kids who have already starred in shows.

The camps are run by the well-known Atlanta Workshop Players, so you'll get plenty of hints about how to wow a crowd.

Scholarship applications are due by May 1. To get one, call 770-998-8111 or send an e-mail to: awplayers@aol.com. More stuff about camp is at www.atlantaworkshopplayers.com.
